

You have been tested.

What's next?

Stay at home until the results are known.

Are you getting sicker or do you need medical help? Do not go to the hospital or the GP. Call the general practitioner and tell him that you have been tested.

Take care of personal hygiene.

Keep a distance of 1.5 meters from housemates.

Write down who you have had contact with in the past few days.

In case of a positive test result, Public Health will contact you for information and instructions.

In case of a negative test result you do not have to stay at home anymore. Abide by the general prevailing rules. In the event of new or increasing complaints, have yourself tested again. Do you have a negative result, but you are in quarantine? Then you need to stay in quarantine until this is completed
